The Rise of Big Business, 1860-1920

Voluntary Substitutes or Swaps An employer should facilitate and encourage voluntary substitutions and swaps with employees of substantially similar qualifications by publicizing its policy permitting such arrangements, promoting an atmosphere in which substitutes are favorably regarded, and providing a central file, bulletin board, group e-mail, or other means to help an employee with a religious conflict find a volunteer to substitute or swap. It is this amazing history and its wildernesses that are now the big draws to this vast country.
